

DIAGNOSE CASE AS SLEEPING ILLNESS

Oil Driller Is Recovering From Effect of Long Period of Sleep.

IS NOT CONTAGIOUS

Record of Manifestation of Peculiar Disease to Be Kept for Reference.

That sleeping sickness is the disease which has for the past three weeks kept Glen Brandeberry, Tulsa oil driller, in a state of stupor at the residence of his brother, Mr. J. L. Brandeberry, 1221 S. Broadway, is the opinion of Tulsa physicians called into consultation on the case. The disease is not the African sleeping sickness, which is caused by the bite of the tsetse fly, but a condition known as "hypnotic" or "hypnotic" which is due to infection, in Mr. Brandeberry's case, to infected teeth. Extraction having been made the first part of the week, improvement in the patient's condition is now noticeable and his chances for recovery are good. Though still in a coma, his sleep is less profound and he can be aroused.

"It is a perfect case of sleeping sickness, one of the most typical that has come under my observation," said a local physician. "I have only seen five other cases, scattered over a period of about 25 years. Mr. Brandeberry's symptoms are those usually found."

No such thing is possible as an epidemic of this sleeping sickness, as it is not communicable, according to local medical doctors. Ninety-eight per cent of the cases are fatal because the absorption of toxins into the system affects the membrane of the brain, causing paralysis of the central nervous system before the source of the infection can be removed. When the cause is eliminated, scientific treatment is necessary to build up the fighting qualities of the white blood corpuscles.

Records of the general scientific interest in this subject, records and being kept of the local manifestation of the disease and a report will be filed later in the national medical archives.

CITY BASTILE IS EMPTY

For First Time in Past Five Years—No Damages Sunday.

For the first time in the past five years the city bastille was entirely without occupants yesterday. From 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon until 7:40 in the evening there were no prisoners in the municipal jail. John Penn, night jailer, attributed the shortage of "boarders and roomers" to the existing scarcity of whisky, cake, white mice, gin and other refreshments of like character. O. K. Ed, judge of the municipal criminal court, declared that since prohibition his dockets had decreased considerably. At present there are seldom more than 12 cases a day in police court while prior to prohibition 100 cases was an average.

Hindus Wonderful Massage Artists, So A Tulsa Nurse Says

When Noah imbibed too freely of the fruit of the vine after leaving the ark, the India legend has it that an angel descended from heaven and instructed Mrs. Noah in the art of massage.

This is the origin of massage as told in India, according to Mrs. A. W. Coleman, head of the home nursing department of the local Red Cross during the war and now permanently located here, as a nursing nurse. Sunday an Ideal Day

Whatever his private opinion about the league of nations, prohibition, or jazz music, everybody in Tulsa was unanimous in declaring Sunday a "perfect peach of a day." The bright sunshine and balmy air with which the weather man obliged us lured many out doors and bath "foodies" and limousines howled right merrily up and down the boulevards. Those who did "mobile" walked or tramped into the country and some of the hunting faith went "back to nature" early in the morning, not turning their backs to nature until dusk.

Work more—Produce more—Save more—

But we can't continue increasing our production unless we continue increasing our railroad facilities.

The farms, mines and factories cannot increase their output beyond the capacity of the railroads to haul their products.

Railroads are now near the peak of their carrying capacity.

Without railroad expansion—more engines, more cars, more tracks, more terminals—there can be little increase in production.

But this country of ours is going to keep right on growing—and the railroads must grow with it.

To command in the investment markets the flow of new capital to expand railroad facilities—and so increase production—there must be public confidence in the future earning power of railroads.

The nation's business can grow only as fast as the railroads grow.
